

Media Release 6 August 2014

Based in the Mackenzie Country, High Country Carpentry is a small team of passionate skilled carpenters. Our vision – to provide our clients with a team bound by old fashioned values, and uphold the definition of carpentry ‘working in the art of timber’.

We have a commitment to our industry and our community, to be a part of raising and teaching our young. We understand our high country climate and respect our environment, resulting in a build that is full of individual character.

Our carpenters undertake projects of all sizes from a custom made door, to a renovation, or architectural build. Each carpenter brings different strengths to the team so the client can find themselves working closely with several different team members on a project. All staff are focused on manners, presentation, respect for the client, their build and their budget, pride in their work and passion for their profession. Our young staff are part of this culture daily and want to emulate this.

We are locals who build for locals. We work with the latest technology, new trends and developments. Sustainability is key in our operation. We are presently using lots of recycled timber out of Christchurch as features on our builds, providing a good price and a feel good factor for the client.

We have learnt and live by the edict ‘it’s all about the service’. Prices are similar, and work standard can appear to be the same most times. The point of difference for a small young business is customer service.
